

Minerva Journal of Women and War

Edited by Linda Grant De Pauw
and Jennifer G. Mathers

“The first complete magazine to cover the topic...fills a need in the military/women world.”—Library Journal.

Minerva Journal of Women and War is a multi-disciplinary, peer-reviewed scholarly journal that examines the roles of women in war and the ways that conflict affects women’s lives.

For two decades, the Minerva Center, Inc, a non profit, tax exempt educational foundation, published MINERVA: Quarterly Report on Women and the Military. The journal was established in 1983 by Linda Grant De Pauw, now

Professor Emeritus of the George Washington University and a pioneer in the study of women’s military history.

Starting in 2007, the journal is published by McFarland and Company under the title Minerva Journal of Women and War. The journal has a new editorial team which will build upon the journal’s strong tradition of publishing ground-breaking articles in military history while emphasizing the study of contemporary issues from a range of disciplinary approaches, including political and international relations, sociology, anthropology, women’s studies, war studies, peace studies and cultural studies. The journal is the official publication of the Minerva Society for the Study of Women and War (MSSWW), www.minervacenter.com.
